THE MAN WHO NEVER VOTES.

The man who criticizes the government of city, nation and then stays home on election day is about partner of the corrupt politician who the voters. —Baltimore American.
Above is true, and can not be denied. How do we hear some man say, "Politics are so that I never go to the polls."
The expression is frequently made, and yet the man who stays away from the polls on election day is nothing more than a figure who has no interest at heart but his own interest.

There he is, true, patriotic citizen, he would go to polls every election day and vote his convictions whatever they might be. If "politics are rotten" he would be there to purify them.

A man who stands on the street corner or in grocery store and condemns the government has not done that which he thinks is right and yet did not cast a vote either way is more or less than a "knocker" of the type and should not be called a citizen. There is no place in this great country of ours. He belongs to Russia, where men are devalued right of citizenship and serve the Czar. He wants them.

A stay-at-home voter has no place in the government of our country and should be prevented from its vote.

A patriotic and come out on November 2, and vote your conscience and honest to yourself and if you want a good government, a pure government, and a government, vote the "Log Cabin"

A clean party stands for all these things.

That Beckham, Van Sant, Haley, etc., Stanley, etc., Democratic State ticket? A Beckham falling all over himself supporting (1) Stanley, do you?

Opening the Farm For Bigger Crops

Third Dimension of the Farm an Important Factor to Greater Crops and Bigger Dividends.

WISD farmers are beginning to realize that a farm goes farther than length and breadth. Depth is a vital factor, and incidentally this third dimension has a clearly identified influence upon the producing value of the earth's surface.

Thus "vertical farming," a newer method of agriculture, is rapidly developing. Merely to scrape the surface from a hog's hide is not enough. Deeper cutting is essential in order to reach the bacon. And experience has shown that to simply plow or turn the soil is very often only the scratch-scratch of a hoe when it comes to crops.

The productivity of a farm is increased by the tight clay or hard pan lying on the top soil. Costly implements for tilling this upper soil and

A CHANGEFUL VOTER.

It is announced that President Wilson will cast his ballot in New Jersey for the equal suffrage movement. But there is plenty of time for him to change his mind. In the campaign of 1912 he announced himself in favor of free tolls for coastwise traffic through the canal but in 1913 he secured repeal of the free tolls provision. In 1912 he advocated economy, but in 1913 and 1914 he approved the most extravagant legislation in American history. In 1912 he pledged himself to "preserve the sacred rights of American citizens at home and abroad," but in August, 1913, he urged Americans to "leave Mexico immediately," not withstanding they were there by rights protected by treaties as sacred as it is possible for nations to make. In 1912 Mr. Wilson loudly proclaimed his support of the spirit of the civil service law, but in 1913 he disregarded that law in the face of protests from organized friends of the merit system in government service. It will be very for the equal suffragists not to count Mr. Wilson's vote until after it is cast.

Why is it that the Democratic press is making such a fuss over the recent registration? They are claiming fraud and everything else, in many of the larger cities, while the Republicans are "sawing wood," and will pile up the votes on election day.

Secretary Josephus urges the building of forty-eight battleships at an average cost of $18,000,000 each. Eighteen million dollars multiplied by forty-eight equals $864,000,000. Billion dollar Congress, eh? And then some!—Commercial Tribune.

There is some splendid councilmanic material among the bunch of candidates who have announced for Council this year. Citizens, get together, sift the chaff, and elect men who will put Maysville to the front as never before.

It's no use. The Democratic press are trying to throw cold water on Morrow's candidacy for Governor. He is the logical candidate, and the crowds he is having all over the State indicate his election.

Let us have a Council that will give the people their rights. Mr. Voter, don't forget you ought to elect your own city officers. Vote for the Councilmen who are in favor of your ideas.

Prospects for a good fall business are bright. Merchants are elated over the outlook, and are predicting a business more than normal.

Let the people elect their own city officers. This is their inherent right and should never have been usurped by any body of Councilmen.

In Boston they have it that the Colonel is going to vote the Republican ticket next. Stranger things have happened.

Who's going to be elected Councilman from your Ward, is the all-inspiring question today in Maysville.

Conductor—"Come out of it, mister. You got to change here—this car goes to the barn."

Rube (seeing New York, half asleep): "Go right ahead, sonny! I ain't fed a hog or milked a cow in over a week, b'gosh. I'll help you do the chores this evening."—Puck.

"Bill has been slaving away at that desk for more than twenty years. I wonder why he has never been promoted?"

"Why, he's always taken a pride in doing more than he's been paid for, and his employers have been afraid they couldn't fill his place."—Puck.

DEMOCRATS RIDDLED BY MORROW

Republican Nominee Makes Good Impression At Lebanon Opera House.

COURTROOM TOO SMALL TO ACCOMMODATE AUDIENCE.

Lebanon, Ky., October 18.—Before an enthusiastic audience that taxed the capacity of the spacious opera house here, the home city of former Governor Proctor Knott, this evening Edwin P. Morrow, Republican nominee for Governor, vigorously flayed A. O. Stanley, the Democratic candidate, for the latter's criticism of former Governor Wilson during that official's term of office in spending $25 out of public funds for the purchase of a wreath which was placed on the grave of Knott as the tribute of the people of Kentucky to the memory of a great Kentuckian.

"In a useless and a ridiculous attempt to uphold the hands and to defend the record of Barksdale Hamlett, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the Democratic nominee for Secretary of State, my opponent, Mr. Stanley, seeks to call former Governor Wilson to task for the alleged waste of money by sending $25 worth of flowers to be placed on the grave of Knott," said Morrow, "in this, the home of that distinguished statesman who was the successful candidate for the gubernatorial chair against my father many years ago. As a Republican and as a Kentuckian, I endorse with all my heart this act of Governor Wilson in sending a tribute to the grave of Proctor Knott as a token of Kentucky's esteem for the memory of an illustrious son. The spectacle of Stanley's objecting to the sending of this wreath is absurd and ridiculous and is so base that even Mr. Stanley himself has not repeated the objection."

Mr. Morrow was loudly cheered for his remarks in answer to this attack.

Opera House Filled.
The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic political rallies ever held in Marion county. The speaking was to have been held in the courthouse, but owing to the size of the crowd that gathered in Lebanon early in the day members of the Republican Campaign Committee in charge of the rally, decided to have Mr. Morrow speak in the opera house. The building was filled to overflowing and many men and women who were unable to attend the speaking called at the nominee's headquarters at the Hotel Vaughn after the meeting to see him.

REPUBLICANS CONFIDENT

Roy Wilhoit and Judge Gilliam Speak At Jamestown.

Jamestown, Ky., October 18.—Judge John H. Gilliam and Roy Wilhoit spoke to a large crowd here this afternoon in the interest of the Republican ticket. Their addresses were well received and local Republican look forward with confidence to the outcome of the election.

Judge Gilliam and Mr. Wilhoit are engaged in a speaking campaign in the smaller towns which Mr. Morrow will not be able to visit. They report that they are being heard by good audiences at all points.

They announced the following dates for this week: Tomorrow, Burkesville; Wednesday, Tompkinsville and Summer Shade; Thursday, Edmonston and Gradyville; Friday, Columbia; Saturday, Liberty.

Burrowers—Beware!

Gophers and prairie dogs are the bane of western farmers, while in the east woodchucks are the type of burrowing animals that cause the tillers of the soil to forget some of the things the dominie tells them on Sundays.

Don Leonardo Ruiz, a California rancher, says "dynamite is the proper medicine to give ground squirrels, gophers, prairie dogs, etc."

Take an inch and a half or two inches of dynamite. Put it in a bit of cloth or several thicknesses of paper to form a small round cartridge. Tie the cloth or paper firmly about one end of a piece of fuse twelve or fourteen inches long, but do not use a cap.

Insert one of these charges well into the mouth of every hole and pack loose dirt around the fuse, leaving enough of the end outside to light easily. Light the fuse and go on to the next hole. There will be no explosion.

There being no cap or other detonator, the dynamite will simply burn. Filling the hole with dense, poisonous fumes that will almost instantly stifle and then kill every living thing inside.

People who go the pace usually arrive—and stay.

WHAT MAKES A CITY?

The Philadelphia Evening Ledger has a short editorial on "What Makes a City Great?" and this is the way it answers the question:

The greatness of this city, blessed with a location unsurpassed among inland cities of the world, can never surpass the greatness of the living men who are in charge of its development.

Why handicap it by putting little men in power who could not do great things even if they desired?

It is the men who make a city. A grand city can not be expected from men of low ideals. A stream rises no higher than its source. If you are to have a good city you have to have good, clean, upright, courageous men devoted to its development. We don't gather figs from thistles, neither in nation nor in society nor government.

"I am for men," said Henry George, and that should be the platform of every true citizen. Men are wanted who will not waste themselves in pleasure, but who will devote themselves to the happiness of the people. Let neither party, sect, society nor church interfere with the practical application of this idea.—Ashland Independent.

The merchant who forgets to advertise should not complain when the buyer forgets that he is in business. It's just a case of "forget" all around.

ACCUSES STANLEY OF SIDESTEPPING

E. P. Morrow, In Speech At Leitchfield, Scores Alleged Evasive Tactics of His Opponent.

DEMOCRATS DARE NOT DISCUSS ISSUES, HE SAYS.

Hardinsburg, Ky., October 18.—Edwin P. Morrow, Republican nominee for Governor, in address in the courthouse here Saturday afternoon, denounced the alleged evasive tactics of A. O. Stanley and of other members of the Democratic State ticket in meeting the issues of the present campaign.

Mr. Morrow declared that the Democrats have failed satisfactorily to answer any of the charges made against them and that they spend most of their time in sidestepping the real issues of the day in desperate attempts to stay away the time until election day.

"For some reason best known to my distinguished opponent, Mr. Stanley and his fellow nominees on the Democratic ticket are making more or less skillful efforts to evade questions and issues of vital interest to Kentucky in the present campaign," said Mr. Morrow. "At his opening speech at Glasgow last night, Mr. Stanley spoke at length of the cotton fields of Louisiana and of the South in the days following the war."

Won't Discuss Issues.

"Later he went back to ancient Rome, thousands of years ago and now he is talking about the invisible government. Mr. Stanley is afraid to talk about Kentucky. He is afraid to tell the real truth about the condition of the government of the Commonwealth after nearly four years of Democratic rule. Stanley is no fool and he knows as well as every intelligent citizen of the Commonwealth, Democrat and otherwise, that the present administration has broken practically every promise it made with the people of Kentucky in 1911, when it was entrusted with the welfare of the State."

"Reckless extravagance in nearly every department of the State government has followed the party's solemn promise to exercise the utmost economy in the expenditure of the public funds. Unjust taxation under Democratic laws has continued to prevail in spite of the Democratic stand in 1911 for a revision of our entire system of providing funds for the maintenance of the government."

Lobbyists Hold Sway.

"An anti-lobby law was promised, but none was passed, and Kentucky bears the shame among the States of the Union of permitting and considering it lawful for unrestricted graft and greed in the form of lobbyists to have full sway under the very dome of the capitol at Frankfort. Every lobbyist is a living testimonial of the fact and charge that the Democratic party broke its faith with the people of Kentucky."

Mr. Morrow said that the existence of these lobbyists is not denied even by Democracy, and he points to the fact that Mr. Stanley has admitted their existence in a number of addresses in the course of the campaign.

"Along came Owsley Stanley admitting the horrible conditions that have existed at the recent sessions of the Legislature," said Mr. Morrow. "He unsheathed his sword and like a modern Jack the Giant Killer he exclaims, 'Show me the lobby and I will kill it!'"

He does that only up in the mountains, however. Down in Louisville and in other parts of the State he changes his tune completely and makes a plea for the re-election of the present Representatives who were members in full standing of the notorious "shuck that graft built."

Again Issues Challenge.

Mr. Morrow also referred to the bankrupt conditions of the State Treasury today, and he repeated an unaccepted challenge which he issued to Mr. Stanley two weeks ago in which he offered to pay one-half of the expenses of an auditor to go over the State books at Frankfort to prove the truth or the falsity of Mr. Morrow's charges that the finances of the Commonwealth are in a frightful condition.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WELL?

Many Maysville People Know the Importance of Healthy Kidneys

The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. Well kidneys remove impurities. Weak kidneys allow impurities to multiply.

No kidney ill should be neglected. There is possible danger in delay. If you have backache or urinary troubles,

If you are nervous, dizzy or worn out. Begin treating your kidneys at once; Use a proven kidney remedy. None endorsed like Doan's Kidney Pills.

Recommended by thousands. Proved by Maysville testimony. Lang Stevens, Maysville, says: "My kidneys were out of order and I had backache, which extended into my kidneys. The kidney action was irregular. Doan's Kidney Pills had been used in my family, so I gave them a trial. They helped me greatly."

WILLSON AT GLASGOW

Compares His Record in Office With That of McCreary.

Glasgow, Ky., October 18.—Augustus E. Willson, former Governor, spoke here today in the interest of the Republican State ticket and despite inclement weather a good-sized audience greeted him.

A greater part of his speech was devoted to defending his administration from attacks made by Mr. Stanley and comparison of his administration with that of the present Democratic administration.

Mr. Willson discussed the tobacco situation in Kentucky and told his hearers that he called the first conference that resulted in better understanding between the growers and buyers and decided better prices for the growers. He paid considerable attention to Mr. Stanley and at the close paid a splendid tribute to Mr. Morrow and the State ticket and assured the voters that they would not make a mistake by electing the Republican ticket in November. Many Democrats heard the speech and some complained it.

RAPS STANLEY'S HYPOCRISY

F. T. Franks Speaks To 400 Voters
At Mt. Sterling.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., October 18.—Ed. T. Franks, of Owensboro, spoke here today to 400 voters. He was introduced by Judge Robert H. Winn and spoke for two hours.

Mr. Franks delivered a severe arraignment of the State and national administrations and showed up Stanley's hypocrisy on the liquor question and his changed ideas regarding affairs at Frankfort since the recent primary. Barksdale Hamlett and Creel also came in for strong censure. There were many Democrats at the meeting and many of them announced for Morrow. Much enthusiasm was shown.

He "popped"—but not in vain!

What Is Your Blood Pressure?

The age of the 40s is a critical period in every person's life. And one of the most common things that makes it critical is increased "blood pressure" with its accompanying "hardening of the arteries."

Scientists have fully proven that increased blood pressure is caused by poisonous deposits in the delicate tissues of the arteries. One of the chief agents in this process is coffee, with its poisonous drug, caffeine.

"A man is as old as his arteries," life insurance companies say, and the Blood Pressure Test is one of the principal factors nowadays in determining a "risk." How do you stand?

If there is any doubt about coffee's hurting—if you have frequent headaches, biliousness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or heart flutter—try a 10 days' change to

Postum comes in two forms: The original Postum Cereal—must be well boiled, and Instant Postum—the soluble form, made in the cup instantly.

"SAFETY FIRST"

Prizes Offered For Best Slogan—Purpose To Protect Human Life

The slogan "Safety First," embodied in a pictorial poster, is worth to the designer the snug sum of $300. In due time this poster will mark the streets and highways of the entire country, according to the plans of the Safety First Society of Greater Detroit.

A contest for such a poster will be launched by the society at the convention of the Safety First Federation of America in Detroit, October 19 and 20, and will close about January 1, all designs to be submitted to the society at the Detroit Board of Commerce.

The competition will be open to all artists in the United States and for the design, which in the opinion of the judges will bring most forcibly to the minds of the people "safety first" on the streets and highways of the country, $300 will be paid. The second best will be awarded $100, the third $50, the fourth $30, and the fifth $20.

The five judges will be appointed by Darwin P. Kingsley, of New York City, president of the Safety First Federation of America, who will meet immediately after the close of the contest and make the awards.

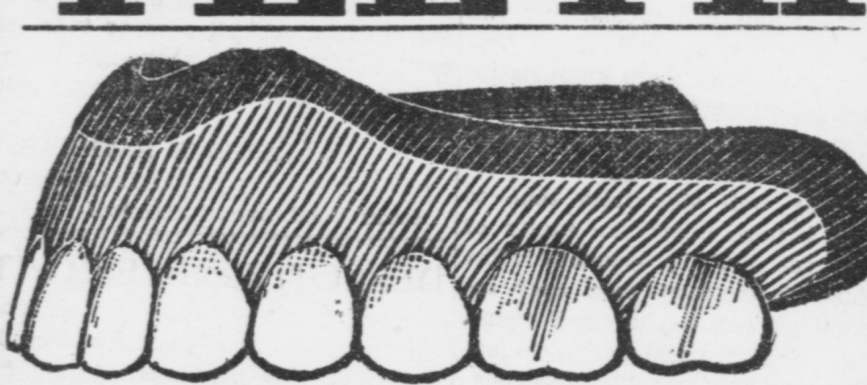

This will be but one of the features of the national convention in Detroit. Reports will be presented at that time from committees on street traffic, transportation, fire prevention, health and sanitation, "safety first" for children, and a standard code of traffic regulations will be recommended for adoption by cities throughout the country, and there will be discussions by national authorities of many other phases of the subject of public safety. Every city in the United States is asked to appoint three delegates to the convention.

The poster design must relate to safety on the streets and highways, and contain the words "Safety First," and be adaptable to nation-wide use. The design must be on flexible cardboard or paper, 8 1/2 by 11 inches, and of such character as to lend themselves to lithographic or color process printing and zinc reproduction. The general rules covering the competition can be obtained from the Safety First Society of Greater Detroit.

Alonso P. Ewing, president of the society, believes that this contest will aid in arousing such interest as to prompt the formation of many safety first organizations throughout the country and decrease the number of street accidents by one-half.

"At no time in the history of the world has the recognized value of human life been so high as at present," said President Ewing, "notwithstanding the terrible havoc that is being wrought by the European war. Evidence has not been wanting during

Children at an Open Air School

LOUISVILLE has a school for those anaemic, rundown children who are ordinarily subject to every form of disease. Such children are greatly retarded in school, not only through their poor physical condition, but also through frequent loss of time on account of sickness. Among those children also the germs of tuberculosis may later find good soil.

This picture shows the warm suits and caps provided for the children, who are kept all day long in the open air. Windows on both sides of the school-room are kept continually open.

At noon the children are given a substantial meal at the school and then rest on cots for about an hour.

Experience in Louisville and throughout the country shows that this combination of fresh air, nourishing food and rest under the supervision of a physician and a visiting nurse will produce remarkable results. The children uniformly show increased weight, better color, better spirits and greater activity. The school work is made subordinate to the care of the children's health, yet with fewer hours of instruction each day they make progress equal to that of normal children in the typical schoolroom. If fresh air is good for sick children it must also be good for healthy children. The day is coming, according to Dr. Landis of Cincinnati, when every schoolroom will be an open air room.

You visit the pen you keep your pigs in, but do you visit the school to which you send your children? Do you really know whether it is clean and well ventilated? Does it have good water and clean closets? If your school is not clean and well ventilated, protest to the teachers and trustees till the faults are remedied.

the last twenty years to show the desire on the part of all to safeguard life, limb and property. During that time the greatest effort along this line has been made in manufacturing and industrial activities and the results have been wonderful.

With the advent of the automobile and other fast moving traffic on our street and highways, there has been an increasing demand for public safety appliances and education throughout the country. Foremost among the larger cities which have taken up the subject is Detroit, where the citizens and public officials have actively cooperated with the Safety First Society of Greater Detroit.

Through the efforts of this organization, a code of traffic rules has been adopted in Detroit which are attracting nation-wide attention. Many of these rules have been accepted as a standard by other large cities throughout the country.

UP TO US NOW.

There is a steady, persistent and growing movement sweeping over this country for the improvement of roads. You can hardly pick up a paper from any section of the country but what you will find the question agitated in its columns.

It is a good sign and speaks well for the future of the country as a whole.

But what of this community?

What are we going to do toward improving our own roads?

No one else is going to answer this question for us. It is clearly up to our own people.

If we want good roads we must make them ourselves. Other people in other communities will not do it for us.

We suggest the formation of a local organization that will take up this question this winter and thrash it out to a logical conclusion, and then let the conclusion produce results.

There are plenty of brains in this community to settle this question in a manner highly satisfactory to every one.

Let's start them working.

Bill Sunday says every man is either on the road to heaven or on the road to hell. If B. S. speaks from experience he must have traveled that hell.

NATIONAL CHILD LABOR LAW

Connecticut Manufacturer Favors a
Sixteen-Year Limit—Children
Not Good Workers.

"We need a national law that will keep children in school until they are 16," Mr. D. H. Warner, one of the largest manufacturers in Connecticut, told a representative of the National Child Labor Committee the other day. Mr. Warner is the head of a large concern in Bridgeport, who recently put his 4,000 employees on a forty-eight hour week, although the state law permits him to operate fifty-five hours a week.

"The manufacturer who employs children of 14 or 15 does not benefit himself because children are not good workers; he does not benefit the community because he harms the child, and it is the good of the community, not the individual manufacturer, that must be considered in this question of child labor."

"I never employ children under 16 if I can get older workers because I consider the years between 14 and 16 the most impressionable ones of a child's life and I know that the factory influence is a bad one, no matter how careful an employer may be. Those years should be spent in school and in the open, not in the factory where physical, mental, moral and financial growth is stunted. If we must have men with a college education in the executive positions, it is equally necessary to have a proportionate amount of training throughout the entire force. I find it extremely difficult to get intelligent girls for responsible positions. I have tried to train them, but their lack of education makes it impossible for them to go beyond a certain point."

"It is true, of course, that poverty makes it necessary for some children to go to work before they are 16. I think it might be advisable to permit exemptions to the sixteen-year limit for such children who are over 14 and are declared physically fit for work by a physician. Cases of actual poverty are not very numerous, however. Many children are sent to work because their parents are not poor but avaricious."

TO CAN FRUIT IN OVEN

By This Method Fruit Retains Its Shape, Color and Flavor to Remarkable Extent.

Cooking canned fruit in the oven is easily and quickly done, while the fruit retains its shape, color and flavor better than when cooked in a preserving kettle.

Cover the bottom of the oven with a sheet of asbestos, the same used by plumbers for covering furnace pipes. This is very reasonable at any plumbing shop. If it is impossible to purchase the asbestos, use a large pan in which there is about two inches of boiling water. Thoroughly sterilize the jars and utensils. Make the sirup of sugar and water as sweet as needed. Prepare the fruit the same as for cooking in the preserving kettle. Fill the hot jars with this, pouring in sufficient sirup to fill the jar. Run the blade of a silver knife around the inside of each jar. (Never use a steel knife.) Place the jars in the oven either on the asbestos or in the open pan of water.

The oven should be moderately hot. Cook the fruit ten minutes. Remove from the oven and fill each jar with boiling sirup. Wipe and seal. If the screw covers are used, tighten them after the glass has thoroughly cooled.

Large fruits may require a pint of sirup to each quart jar of fruit. The small fruit will require a little over half a pint of the sirup—Ladies' World.

SOME SIMPLE FOOD TESTS

How Ptomaine Poisoning Can Be Avoided by Testing Contents of Can for Copper.

Chicory is not harmful and some like it, but when we buy coffee we don't want to pay coffee price for chicory. To find out whether you are buying the real thing, put a tablespoonful of the coffee in a glass; pour cold water over it, and watch.

If the coffee is pure the water will hardly be stained. If chicory is present it turns the water a deep brown color.

Here is a good test for canned foods: Put a bright, clean steel knife in the contents directly you open the can. Leave for a minute and chop the present it will be seen on the knife's blade and you've escaped ptomaine poisoning.

Fresh eggs will always sink in water. Stale eggs have smooth and glassy shells; fresh eggs have a lime-like surface.

Minc'd Chicken, Cream Sauce.

Put into a saucepan one tablespoonful of butter, one gill of stock and two tablespoonfuls of stale bread crumbs and stir until boiling. Then add one pint of cold chicken, chopped fine; a teaspoonful salt, a dash of pepper and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Remove from the fire and add two well-beaten eggs; fill into small greased molds, stand in hot water and cook in the oven 15 minutes. Serve hot with a cream sauce made from rich milk, thickened to the consistency of cream. Very nice.

Kitchen Tables.

Two tables in the kitchen lessen work, one preferably zinc-covered to be used for such rough work as preparing vegetables and meats and dish up meals, the other for general convenience. Close to the first, which should be on castors but stand near sink and stove, should be meat-block, meat-saw, meat-knife, small cleaver, food-chopper or a bread and chopping knife, paring knife, vegetable cutters, skewers, basting spoons and such other articles as are frequently used at this table.

Swiss Steak.

Lay thick round steak on a board, sprinkle with salt and pepper and pound in all the flour the meat will take. Treat the other side in the same manner. Put a little butter into the frying pan and when smoking hot brown the meat quickly on both sides. Fill the pan two-thirds full of hot water, cover closely and let cook one and a half or two hours. Onion may be added if desired. When done the gravy will be already thickened.

Frosted Peaches.

Select firm, good peaches. Rub carefully to remove fuzz. Beat the whites of six eggs, with a scant cupful of water. Dip the peaches in this, then roll in powdered sugar, lay on paper in sun to dry. Repeat until there is about coating of the sugar around the peach. If entirely covered, these will keep for a long time, and this is a favorite English method of preparing peaches.

Rhubarb Pudding.

Two pounds of rhubarb, wash and cut in pieces. Don't peel. Then cover with water well and stew until very soft and all color is stewed out of the rhubarb. Then strain and put back on stove with one and one-half cupfuls of sugar added and thicken with two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch. Boil about ten minutes and then set in ice chest in a mold. Nice with cream and sugar.

Candied Peaches.

Weigh the peaches, and to each pound allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Cut each peach into about six pieces. Add just enough water to moisten the sugar and melt it over the fire. Boil each piece of peach in it until it is tender, but not until it breaks easily. Remove from the thick sirup and then in sugar and repeat until the peach is thoroughly dried. Pack in covered glass jars.

Straightening Streams With Dynamite

The ancient Egyptians were noted for their crops because, as history states, they "sowed their seeds in the Nile." This does not mean that they actually cast the seed in the river. At certain seasons of the year the Nile overflows its banks, depositing on either shore a rich silt or earth that is highly conducive to bumper crops, and the wise ancient Egyptians, realizing this, profited thereby.

Water is a necessity. The tiniest brook up to the largest rivers play an important part in the scheme of things inasmuch as they are nature's way of both irrigation and drainage. But being formed according to nature's dictates their courses do not always jibe with man's desires or needs.

Rock ledges impede their progress. Overhanging stupes and trees retard their flow. Numerous irregularities cause them to meander about in apparently wasteful ways, and man's carelessness has added to these troubles by allowing driftwood and loose earth to form dams and sandbars.

All of these things help to hold the flood of waters back and cause either flooding or swamps, which not only occupy land that could be more profitably used for farming, but also form fine breeding places for mosquitoes and other obnoxious pests. Incidentally they cause an annual loss running into millions of dollars per year.

In this day of enlightenment such things are both wasteful and, one might add, criminal, especially so in view of the fact that almost instant relief may be had by a few well placed charges of dynamite. Not only will these blasts straighten out the kinks and bends and remove ledges and sand bars, but they will deepen and improve the channels as nature has really intended. Incidentally by straightening the winding course of a creek much area of tillable land can be obtained and farm operation in many instances made much easier.

NEW TOBACCO FOUND

Stalk Shown Has Eighty Leaves and Eight Feet in Height—Seed Being Saved For Test.

Winchester, Ky.—John Insko, living near this city on the David Gray farm, was exhibiting a stalk of tobacco last week, which is believed to be the largest grown in this section of Kentucky this season. The stalk was eight feet in height and had eighty leaves upon it. It was of the stand-up variety. While Mr. Insko stated he raised an exceptional crop this season, he points to the fact that there were two more stalks like the one he was exhibiting in the field and another nine feet in height. He stated that from all of these he is saving the seed, providing the frost does not get them before they mature. He is positive that he has found an improvement upon the standup variety of Burley tobacco. The quality of the stalk shown was in keeping with other specimens.

INDIGENT HOME

For Kentucky Odd Fellows, Their Widows and Orphans, To Be Located At Eminence—Twenty-seven Acres and Suitable Buildings Purchased By Grand Lodge.

There was not much legislation at the session of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky Odd Fellows at Dawson Springs last week as at most of the preceding meetings, but there was some business transacted that is of great importance to every member of the order. The most important matter that came before that grand body was the selection of a location for the Home for Indigent Odd Fellows, their wives and orphans.

A short time previous to the meeting of the Grand Lodge in the city of Georgetown, in 1907, the question of establishing a home for the indigent Odd Fellows of Kentucky was presented to Bourbon Lodge No. 23, of Georgetown, by Judge January, and after the matter had been presented to the members, the lodge by unanimous vote decided to present the matter to the Grand Lodge. When the Grand Lodge convened in Georgetown, Judge January, as representative of Bourbon Lodge, offered a resolution to that body authorizing the Grand Master to appoint a committee to be known as the Indigent Home Committee, to provide a plan and to solicit funds for the establishment of a Home for Indigent Odd Fellows, their wives and orphans. The resolution was approved by a majority of the members and a committee of seven was appointed, of which Judge January was chairman. He immediately set to work to provide the means for the establishment of such a home by reason of untiring efforts and in the face of all kinds of obstacles.

As an objection by some, half-hearted support by the members of the lodge and the indifference on the part of the majority of the members of the order, a sufficient number of pledges have been secured to the home.

The Grand Lodge, at the session of 1914, Judge January, the committee, reported the progress of the work and the committee resolved to continue the work when it had secured pledges amounting to $10,000.

The Grand Lodge session in 1914, Judge January, the committee, reported the progress of the work and the committee resolved to continue the work when it had secured pledges amounting to $10,000.

The recommendation of the committee was accepted by the Grand Lodge, and Judge B. B. January, of Paris; Judge John D. Carroll, of Newcastle; and Judge Warren E. Settle, of Bowling Green, its last two members of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, were appointed to complete purchase of the property and prepare it for the use of indigent Odd Fellows, their wives, widows and orphans, of Kentucky.

The committee now has, in cash and debt, approximately $25,000, and all pledges have been paid, there is sufficient funds to pay for the property and place it in first-class condition, to be occupied by those who are entitled to enter therein. To Judge January is due most of the credit for securing the necessary funds for the establishment of this home, which will prove a great blessing to many in the years to come.

The Grand Lodge will meet in Maysville in 1916.

WORST OF HORRORS

Visit to War Hospitals Described by Writer.

Procession of the Blind Soldiers Leaves an Impression of the Awful Hideousness of War That Can Never Be Effaced.

By GRACE ELLISON.

Northern France—A little town nestled in a wealth of trees in peace time it is almost unheard of, now it is an important military station—this is my next halting place. Every house is occupied by soldiers, every building of importance is turned into a hospital.

So near the front there are cases which need all the science of the trained nurse to pull them through. Men unversed almost to madness, men who mistake all the male staff for the enemy—one has only to listen to the ravings of these poor men to know something of the strain of war on them.

I was taken to the eye ward to see the operations there. Of all the horrors of war, is not this the worst? I have seen jaws smashed beyond recognition—human beings who had forgotten their very names—men who can live to rise old and never have anything in common with the great life going on around them; but the procession of blind men, or men who might be blind, has left an impression of the hideousness of war that can never be effaced.

Here is a brilliant young lieutenant. His father was only a congerie, but he worked and saved to give his son his chance. The son has gone through with flying colors—now he is blind. He was lying in the officers' ward when I saw him—the ward was dark, for there were others suffering, too. He had in his hand a portrait of the little girl he had never seen.

"Only take off the bandage an instant, that I may look at my little girl," he pleaded. "I dare not," answered the doctor. Who will have the courage to tell him the truth?

A poor man has come that day from the trenches—the blood is still on his face—his eyes are bandaged. An old man leads him in, and the nurse prepares him for the examination. One sees the answer on the doctor's face—blind, blind—one after another. One dare not think—the horror of it all seems to numb one's very soul.

We have started early, for we have so far to go and we are stopped; it is another examination of our papers. But who is speaking? Voices seem to be beside me in the car. What is this? I listen carefully, when suddenly two officers pop up from underground and disappear. The horrid, uncanny idea trench war is! It does not seem fair and square.

We have to pass along the road which the French soldiers have christened "the Jews of Death." A young man on the way tells us the German pepper everyone who goes up that road—perhaps we shall be the exception. Up the narrow, stony passage we plow our way—if by any chance the car stops we are finished—yet if we go quickly we shall make a cloud of dust. As it is we are part and parcel of the dusty landscape.

And on we go till we have turned the corner and are safe again for a while. On and on we go—more and more distinctly is the firing heard. Where are we? We are on a height, and suddenly we discover an artillery duel is taking place in the trenches near by—the trenches are ablaze, shells are bursting on all sides. They are going to bombard the hill. The tocsin has already sounded, and all the inhabitants are in the cellars. A group of three women rush out from a neighboring house. One is biting her shawl, another is sobbing bitterly, and yet another cries in anguish, "Year in, year out, how long must this suffering last?"

We are ordered into the cellars. A German aeroplane is there to direct the enemy's firing. We have been seen—this time we have to go through the shells—they will finish us now. Our only hope is speed. One shell has burst 80 yards from the car. Another is sent ahead—it has struck a farm, and the farm blazes up in pillars of smoke and fire. My chauffeur drives right through it—on and on like a flash of lightning.

Have they ceased firing? I shall hear those shells for days and days. I am too tired even to be tired. All along the road the troops are moving. They are so covered with dust they might be Asiatics, and the sun has browned them to a manliness a woman cannot fail to admire.

It was a curious visit. I was glad I went. But how strange they look, these dwellers in the bowels of the earth. In one trench is a roof of hurdles, covered with leaves, which opens and shuts like the fairy-book trap door; there is a mud and hurdle seat on which letters are being written to those loved ones left behind.

And they are all so well and happy and confident, these soldiers, and so courteous and so manly. Can it be possible they are the Parisians we knew only a year ago? The ordering out of the pale, underdressed males, who lounge along the boulevards; the taking from the cafes, drawing rooms and theater wings the idle youth of the country, and turning them into dwellers of the forest and plain, with a sense of danger and duty, is not this the only side of war that is tolerable?

How would you like to be compelled to go or send to some other town or city every time you want a paper of pins, or a spool of thread, or a sack of tobacco? 'T would be a frightful nuisance, wouldn't it? And you wouldn't want to live in such a graveyard town, anyway, would you? And you would feel just like selling your farm or town property and going to some place with a little life, wouldn't you—that is, if you COULD sell, and if anybody else was foolish enough to want to settle down and invest in a "dead hole." Now, do you think it is just a fair proposition—or even to your own interest as a property owner—to make a convenience of the local dealer when you want pins or a sack of tobacco, and then send your trade back worth having away to some place where you doesn't care whether you live or die, just so long as he gets your money? Do you?

VENICE DURING WAR

Practically Closed to Visitors of Every Nationality.

The Gondola and the Pigeons of St. Mark's Square, the City's Two Chief Characteristics, Threatened With Destruction.

By CAMILLO GIANFARRA.

Venice.—Of all the threats and perils which the exigencies of modern progress, and the requirements of modern life have heaped on Venice and her unique quaint beauty, those resulting from war are practically the worst, as they threaten the destruction of Venice's chief characteristics, the gondola and the pigeons of St. Mark's square.

Venice saw her last brilliant season in the spring of 1914. As to the summer bathing season, it was hastily interrupted at its height by the sudden outbreak of hostilities. Owing to her position, to the fact that she possesses one of the most important military arsenals of Italy and that she is the seat of the maritime defense of the Adriatic, the city has since then been practically closed to visitors of every nationality.

After Italy's intervention, Venice became a sort of Asiatic forbidden city, and not even Italians are admitted without a special permit from the commander in chief. This permit, however, is only issued to those who can prove to the satisfaction of the inequitable authorities that they have legitimate business to transact within the city boundaries, and is invariably temporary. Idlers, curiosity-mongers, and the so-called lovers of the picturesque, are inexorably excluded. As to the newspaper men—well, Admiral Cutinelli regards them as the most undesirable of all, whether they be Italians or from the allied countries.

The first result of the stringent measures adopted by the military authorities concerning the sojourn of foreigners, was a general closing of all large hotels and the transforming of the Lido into a sort of huge sanatorium where thousands of convalescing soldiers now bask in the sun wrapped in long white tunics and await the time for returning to the front to finish the job.

Our people will not be backward in this respect—unless you set them the example. They will be looking for your advertisement, telling them what YOU have that THEY want.

But those who have suffered most from the absence of visitors are the thousands of pigeons nesting in the buildings and towers of Venice's famous square. It is a well-known fact that the few pounds of Indian corn the municipality provides for their maintenance are anything but sufficient properly to nourish the poor creatures, and that it was the charity of the tourists which in former years and at all seasons provided them with substantial food.

But now, the familiar sight of the old English lady or the young American misses feeding the pigeons in the center of the square is no longer to be seen and the poor birds vainly clamor around the man who stops to admire this or that facade or the frescoes of St. Mark's. The corn vendors, known to thousands of Americans by their first name, are there as usual, but the purchasers are few, and the cooing pigeons fly back disappointed. Of late the pigeons have begun to emigrate to avoid starvation.

As to the gondolas and the gondoliers, they have suffered terribly from the war, and their fate resembles much that of the pigeons. It was the tourist and the wealthy visitor who patronized the gondolier, and their absence from the city for more than a year has compelled scores of gondola proprietors to go out of business and sell their outfit at a sacrifice.

The gondolier, the thick-set, sun-burned, muscular specimen of humanity, that sent the gondola skimming over the glassy surface at every stroke of the long oar, has disappeared with the mobilization, and is now either at the front or serving on one of the men-of-war cruising the Adriatic. Only a few old ones are left, and the visitor who now crosses the Grand canal is painfully impressed by the small number of gondolas in service.

At sunset, when the cupolas, the domes and the spires of Venice glitter under the last rays of the parting sun the spectacle presented by the squares is even more saddening. Navy officers in immaculate white uniforms and army officers in gray have now replaced the variegated, fashionable, wealthy crowd that in former years added to Venice's charm and picturesque quality, and tell in unmistakable words the story of Italy at war.

Yet Venice is resigned; no one complains; every class has sacrificed on the altar of patriotism its own private interests.

Akron Man Receives a Bequest of $5,700 From Germany in Spite of the War.

Akron, O.—Charles Quast of this city has received a bequest of $5,700, a share of his parents' estate in Germany. He has thereby won a $10 bet.

Since the death of his parents several months ago Quast has been endeavoring to get his share of the estate. A friend, John Ritzman, bet him $10 that he would never get the money because of the war.

TO LIVE MERCHANTS.

With the Christmas holidays approaching, our citizens will undoubtedly arise to the occasion and boost the prosperity of this town by doing their Christmas shopping at home.

Already the "home spirit" is beginning to take deeper root with our loyal citizens, who are beginning to realize more clearly than ever before that if we are to be a prosperous community we must consider not only the interests of self, but the interests of the community as a whole.

That can only be done by keeping as much as possible of our money at home and in circulation among our home people.

But as a matter of common fairness, it should be remembered that the people have rights that must be respected as well as the merchant.

Very few people have the time to chase all over town and paw all over the goods in every store in order to decide on what they want. Life is too short, and the household and business cares are entirely too pressing to admit of the waste of so much time.

It is but natural, therefore, that if you have Christmas goods for sale the people will expect you to tell them about those goods in order that they may start out on their shopping tours with at least a reasonable knowledge of what they want, where they can find it and what is going to cost them.

There is but one way in which you can put this information before the buying public in an acceptable and inexpensive manner, and that is through the medium of a well written and displayed advertisement in this paper.

Indications are that buying will be on a liberal scale this Christmas, but the people will unquestionably desire some advance information before they buy.

This paper invites you to meet the people half way in an effort to make this a prosperous and merry Christmas for all. Use the advertising columns of the paper liberally, and let the people understand that you can view the subject from their standpoint as well as from that of your own.

Our people will not be backward in this respect—unless you set them the example. They will be looking for your advertisement, telling them what YOU have that THEY want.

Walter Greiner, of Louisville, has launched what rivermen declare is the oddest affair on the Ohio river. His fast motorboat Naxma has been decorated to represent a drift pile. The Greiner brothers are enthusiastic duck hunters and having hit upon this idea believe they will bag many mallards.

The Louisville & Evansville Packet Company is completing, at Cincinnati, a new sidewheel oilburning packet. This steamer, which will be the first of its kind seen on this part of the river, will be used in short trades between Louisville and lower nearby points. If it proves successful two larger ones are to be built. However, these will not supplant the regular packets of the company, but also will be put into short trades.

THE LOVE OF HEALTH.

If any one doubts that this is an era of health propaganda he must, indeed, be oblivious of what is going on about him. Municipal, state and national agencies are using forces and funds at their disposal to further the interests of public hygiene. Educational influences are directing their energies to the spread of the lessons of procurable health in public print and in documents of both official and unofficial character. Novels and short stories, the literature of biography and travel, the platform and even the pulpit are proclaiming the gospel of health far and wide. The medical profession, more enthusiastic if not more vitally interested than any other group in the promotion and outcome of the modern hygienic movement, may well stop from time to time to inquire about the sanity of the methods of the propaganda. The religious doctrine of past ages involved the threat of harm; it incited a fear of the destruction or danger that was sure to follow the violation of the law. This dismal attitude has long since been replaced by a religion of love, of uplift and joyous anticipation. In the health propaganda, likewise, much of the pessimistic attitude, unconsciously perhaps, has been introduced in the past. The fear of disease has been held over the heads of the people. Rarely have we seen the more appropriate spirit of the modern "better health" movement better expressed than in a recent pamphlet of the Life Extension Institution. "It is not a fear of illness or of death that we should encourage, but a love of health, a sense of responsibility for the care of our bodies, a desire for bodily endurance and efficiency and full achievement. If the mind is fixed on these ideals, and the already known means of approaching them are utilized, the needless miseries that embitter the lives of so many may be left to take care of themselves. It is not so much necessary to fight disease as to cultivate health for the happiness, contentment and moral gain that it brings." There is something unusually optimistic and buoyant in such words, says the Journal of the American Medical Association. They embody the psychology due to comfort and happiness for many a patient, without implying that "man is incapable of sin, sickness and death," or that "health is not a condition of matter, but of mind." To inspire a love of health does not mean to exclude the great body of scientific knowledge which is the best that science can offer today regarding disease, or to replace medicine by crude metaphysics. The ardent love of health insures a mind receptive to the lessons of modern medicine.
